Who We Are

Background

In 1988, a massive flood in Bangladesh destroyed lives, livelihoods, and property. Sirajganj, located beside the Jamuna River was seriously affected. National and international NGOs helped flood victims. Local youth, with the leadership of Md. Alauddin Khan, the Executive Director, volunteered with NGOs in emergency response and recovery. The team realized that long-term solutions are needed to help the flood victims and the poor people. Their ideas on sustainable development were well-received by donors. It motivates them to start a new organization, and on January 1, 1992, "National Development Programme (NDP)" officially started its journey.

Vision

A poverty free society where human rights, dignity and social justice be promoted, local capacity built, eliminated gender discrimination and reduced climate change vulnerability.

Mission

NDP works with the communities in order to improve socio-economic status, promote gender equality and bring positive changes in the poor, disadvantaged and vulnerable people in the society through close collaboration with government line departments, local government and administration, civil societies, NGOs, private sectors, development partners and other stakeholders.

Our Guiding Principles and Values

The basic principles of NDP are participation, human rights, accountability, transparency, commitment, professionalism, networking and sustainability. NDP also believes that access to information and public services is the basic right of all people in a community. NDP designs its program based on the needs of community members, particularly the most vulnerable. Reach out to the poor, the disabled, women, and other vulnerable populations.
